Caring and Sharing in Respect at the end of life

May be You are a family member, a neighbor, a good friend with a migration background. Or You are entrusted with home care of a seriously ill person?

The previously self-evident knowledge got lost. The trust and confidence to support a beloved at the end of life is insufficient. Tradition suffered while moving from the country to the city. There is little time left in addition to one's own working life; the apartment is small; money is not countless. Here is support in word and deed is very welcome.

Based on first aid in emergency, we want to work with you on the essential aspects of aid at the end of life in a culturally sensitive manner.

Your ideas and concerns help us to provide a culture-sensitive offer with our outpatient and inpatient palliative services. We like to provide you with important information on physical and psychosocial changes in the seriously ill and show you practical steps.

A good, symptom-free life in the community is important to us.

This is a basic course for domestic support in the community. Please, contact our staff for further Arrangement!
